- The "Holocaust," the Greatest Robbery in History

(Much of the material in this essay came from a YU-prepared report, and from Wikipedia)

We all think of the Holocaust as the Greatest Genocide in History, but it probably was also the Greatest Robbery in History. It brings to mind the verses at the beginning of today's Parashah with regard to passing by the Bnai Esav, and the contrast with the taking of property from the Egyptians in compensation for 116 years of unpaid labor.

Dr. Gerald Feldman, professor of history at the University of California – Berkeley, addressed an audience of Sy Sims School of Business students and outlined the detailed and systematic ways that Germany and Austria, and many other European countries, deprived Jews of property, employment, possessions and family businesses in the years leading up to WWII. Dr. Feldman said this economic plundering laid the ground work for the "Final Solution," the Nazis' plan to murder millions of European Jews.

One of the initial methods of depriving Jewish citizens of their economic capital was Germany's 1931 Flight Tax, which sought to prevent the wealthy from leaving the country with their assets. As more Jews emigrated from Germany, they were heavily taxed. In 1935, Germany reaped $45 million from the tax; by late 1938-9, the figure was $342 million.

Dr. Feldman also discussed the systematic process of Nazis confiscating Jewish-owned businesses and turning them over to other Germans, a process known as "Aryanization." So thorough and so devastating was the Nazi economic war against European Jewry that practically any and all Jewish property was confiscated, initially through intricate governmental legislation, but later through outright brutality. Nothing was spared, Dr. Feldman said. Jewelry, art, furniture, clothes. Even in the concentration camps, after death, Jewish citizens were not free from economic, not to mention human, degradation. It is well known that gold fillings were removed from mouths of the deceased, Dr. Feldman said.

The "Reparations Agreement between Israel and West Germany" was signed on 9/10/52, and went into force on 3/27/53. According to the Agreement, West Germany was to pay Israel for the slave labor and persecution of Jews during the Holocaust, and to compensate for Jewish property that was stolen by the Nazis. In 1951, Chancellor Konrad Adenauer addressed his Parliament, "...unspeakable crimes have been committed in the name of the German people, ..The Federal Government, jointly with representatives of Jewry and the State of Israel...to bring about a solution of the material indemnity problem, thus easing the way to the spiritual settlement of infinite suffering." Public debate was among the fiercest in Israeli history. Opposition to the Agreement came from both the Right and the left of the political spectrum; both sides argued that accepting reparation payments was the equivalent of forgiving Nazis for their crimes...Following a passionate and dramatic speech, Menachem Begin led the protesters towards the Knesset.

Reparation payments have played an important role in Israel's economic life, but they have been a crushing burden on Israel's conscience, according to some Israelis.
