Parashas Vayishlach -Sir Martin Gilbert – Remnants of Esav's Cruelty

Sir Martin Gilbert (October 25, 1936 – February 3, 2015) was one of the great historians of our time. He was Winston Churchill's official biographer, an authority on twentieth century history, and a great and enthusiastic authority on Jewish history. He described himself as a proud practicing Jew and a Zionist.

He wrote a book, "The Righteous," which describes righteous gentiles, who distinguished themselves during the otherwise dark and cruel period of the Nazis by their brave and compassionate activities in behalf of the Jewish People. He divides the book into seventeen chapters, from 'Rescue in the East' till 'In the Camps and on the Death Marches.'

Rescue in the East

"Yaffa Eliach herself (then Yaffa Sonenson), her parents and sister, and several other members of her family, found refuge in the village of Korkuciany with a Polish farmer, Kazimierz Korkuc, and his mother. Korkuc was 'a completely honorable and generous man, who helped dozens, even hundreds, of Jews in the vicinity.' Near his bed was a trapdoor, covered with straw and manure: it led to a narrow shaft, which in turn led to a tunnel that was connected to a pit, a cave-like space beneath and beyond the house, with an air-shaft consisting of a hole beneath a cherry tree'. In this pit, Yaffa hid with three other members of their family. So secret did the hiding spaces have to be that the Sonensons did not know at first that their first cousins had also taken refuge on the Korkuc property: nine Jews in all. Other Jews were also in hiding elsewhere on the property, and on nearby farms where Korkuc had found them a place. A Lithuanian shepherd on the Korkuc estate, Antoni Gawrylkewicz, would warn Jews in hiding when a Polish People's Army unit came into the area; some of these units did not hesitate to kill Jews when they discovered them...After the war, Kazimierz Korkuc and his mother were 'unable to return to their home in safety because of the help they had given to Jews.' "

Lithuania

"One of the Lithuanians chosen by Mordechai Paldiel for inclusion in the 1990 Encyclopedia of the Holocaust was Ona Simaite. At the time of the German occupation, she was a librarian at Vilna University. Using the pretext that she had to recover books that had been loaned to Jewish students, she obtained permission to enter the ghetto, and went there every day, bringing in food and taking out valuable Jewish books, which she then hid in the university library. She also managed to smuggle a Jewish girl past the guards at the ghetto gate, and then to find her several hiding places, until she was accidentally discovered. "

"In the summer of 1944, Ona Simaite adopted a ten-year-old Jewish girl, registering her as a relative from another town which, she said, had been severely bombed. Enquiries were made by the authorities, who discovered that the story was false. Cruelly tortured, Ona Simaite revealed nothing about her many Jewish contacts, or about the hiding places of which she had first-hand knowledge. Sent to Dachau, she survived the war, though much weakened by her incarceration."

"In Lazdejai, a Lithuanian priest was asked for help by a seventeen-year-old Jewish girl, Guta Kaufman, whose family had been murdered during the slaughter of the town's Jews. The priest then did what he could to help Guta, obtaining forged 'Aryan' documents for her, and in due course placing her in the home of Wanda Balduska, an elderly Polish woman who, as a devout Catholic, regarded saving the Jewish girl as a religious imperative. Guta remained with Wanda until the area was liberated by the Red Army. With the aid of the priest's house-keeper, Wanda supplied Guta's needs out of her own funds. In the words of Yad Vashem, 'She linked her fate with that of her Jewish charge, and cared for her with love and devotion.'"
